Story Reading: Read the short story to understand the different elements in the story.

It was a hot summer day. A fox was prowling about for food. He wanted to quench his thirst and satisfy his hunger. He searched for food and water but did not get anything to eat and drink despite of his sincere efforts. His thirst and hunger reached to the extreme point. Eventually, he came to a vineyard. He saw ripe bunches of grapes dangling on the vine. The grapes fascinated him and he thought that he would satisfy his hunger with grapes. He tried his level best to reach the grapes. But he failed to get hold of the grapes. He tried again and thought that he would succeed .

He jumped with his full strength but all was in vain. He did not get disheartened. He tried again thinking that it would be a great feast to him. But he failed again. Ultimately he said, “These grapes are sour. Why should I waste my time for them?”

The fox did not realise that it was his problem that he could not get the grapes. This blame game has become the way of the world. One should have the strength to accept one’s weakness.
